

This product is dedicated to Maya Schonburg who loved the wild coast where she built herself a small hermitage.

CILENTO IS A NATIONAL PARK AND A UNESCO WORLD HERITAGE SITE WITH ABOUT 10 MILES OF WILD COAST IS BY FAR THE LONGEST STRETCH OF COASTLINE FREE FROM MAIN ROADS OF THE ENTIRE ITALIAN MAINLAND.

It is covered by woods and Mediterranean bush and has the highest botanical biodiversity of Europe. The landscape is stunningly dramatic with mountains as high as 1200 meters within a couple of km of the beaches. The many beaches and coves can be reached only by boat or on foot as in a deserted island.

Mrs Fiamma Petrilli Pintacuda, nicknamed "the warrior" for her environmental battles, in the 70s tried to stop the road initially by denying access to the estate owned by her family and involving various ministers that she knew.

Finally threatened by expropriation for public use, she and her sons donated a 2 hectares strip of land to the Fondo Ambiente Italiano, the Italian National Trust which cannot be expropriated.

So the Wild Coast was saved and within a few years became a National Park, a Unesco site and recently a Protected Marine Area.

WONDERFUL
WILD COAST

Each bottle of Cilento Wild Coast
is unique.

The botanicals are
foraged by hand
and the ingredients
change with the seasons
providing new sensations.
So every distillation
can become an unrepeatable
organoleptic
work of art.

Botanicals

The principal aromatic ingredient is the red juniper which gives a unique, delicate, intense and Mediterranean taste to the Cilento Wild Coast.
The other main ingredients are the myrtle leaves which is an abundant species of the Mediterranean bush, the rock samphire which grows on the rocks sprayed by the waves, is full of iodine and has a salty flavour and finally the zest of the lemons of the Scario orchards.
Those are picked a few hours before distillation.

Organoleptic
characteristics

Brilliant and crystalline at sight.
Harmonious on the nose, fresh of citrus, enriched by notes of myrtle followed by spicy shades of samphire and red juniper where the scents of the Mediterranean bush are felt.

On the palate is perfectly balanced, round, lightly savoury with a warm end in which the soft and spicy notes can be appreciated.
